

Christmas Day – (Year B) – December 25, 2017

IS 52:7-10; PS 98:1, 2-3, 3-4, 5-6; HEB 1:1-6; JN 1:1-18

It's interesting to compare and contrast the Christmas Eve Gospel passage—which was proclaimed yesterday evening—with the Christmas Day Gospel passage which we just heard, because considering them together helps reveal the extent of God's love for us.

But first, a word about God's love...and this is aimed especially at any visitors here today, or those who were, perhaps, raised Catholic but have strayed from the Church.

Here is a true statement: God is love (1 Jn 4:8).

Here's another: God loves you.

Now, when I was a little kid growing up in the 1970's, I had my fill of sermons that talked about God's love, but which did nothing for me personally, because they seemed so remote from real life. I mean, if my family was struggling, for example... then hearing a priest say, "God loves you" without helping me understand how to bring God's love into the painful situation, did nothing to make my Catholic faith seem relevant to my real life.

I wanted more. I needed substance. And touchy-feely preaching left me spiritually hungry!

God does love me...and he loves you—but when we're hurting, such words can feel more like a trite cliché or a fluffy platitude than a relief or a support. For God's love to be real to me—especially when I'm having a tough go of it—I need something more than well-intentioned words. I need to understand God's love for me, so I can open myself to it...and experience it.

So, a comparison and a contrast between the Christmas Eve Gospel and the Gospel for this morning's Mass can help us better appreciate the way God's love affects each of us—in the messy reality of our daily lives.

First, the Christmas Eve Gospel.

For this liturgical year, the passage comes from the very beginning of Matthew's Gospel and details the genealogy of Jesus. You recall the Gospel:

Abraham became the father of Isaac; Isaac became the father of Jacob; Jacob became the Father of Judah... (cf. Mt 1:1-2ff) and so on... until we travel 42 generations to get to Joseph....the husband of Mary (cf. Mt 1:16)...and foster-father of Jesus.

The Son of God became a real human being in the person of Jesus Christ, coming initially as a poor, vulnerable baby. He didn't just pop into existence magically. He had real relatives...actual ancestors... some of whom were good people and some of whom were scoundrels. In other words, he came from a flawed family tree—just like you and me.

What does that tell us?

Well, for starters...that God doesn't love us from a distance. Rather, he gets into our mess with us! So, when the Prophet Isaiah said that the Messiah would be named Emmanuel—a name which means “God with us”—he really meant WITH us. With us in every aspect of human life...with its ups... and downs... its joys... and sorrows.

In other words, we have a God who actually understands us.

The fact that God became human is a big deal. So big a deal that some people reject Jesus as God precisely because he became human. They see his choice to become human as somehow diminishing his power and degrading his greatness. But if God is really all powerful—as we proclaim he is when we recite the Creed—then wouldn't he have the power to become human?

Instead of looking askance at the self-imposed limitations that God accepted when he became human, we should see love. But sometimes we can't see it, because our sin not only blinds us to genuine love, it also prevents us from receiving that love. That's why God the Father felt compelled to save us by sending us his Son.

God is love (1 Jn 4:8)...and genuine love, by definition, wants to give of itself. But if the intended recipient can't receive that love, then something must be done. So,

God sent his Son to solve this problem...to save us from sin so he could restore us to love.

But, believe it or not, it gets even better. God did not just come to free us from sin and free us for love. God came to change us into something that we could not become on our own.

And that's where the Christmas Day Gospel passage—the one we just heard—comes into play. It will be well worth hearing these verses again when you realize what it means for you...personally!

Here goes:

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. He was in the beginning with God. All things came to be through him, and without him nothing came to be. What came to be through him was life, and this life was the light of the human race; the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness has not overcome it...The true light, which enlightens everyone, was coming into the world. He was in the world, and the world came to be through him, but the world did not know him. He came to what was his own, but his own people did not accept him. But to those who did accept him he gave power to become children of God, to those who believe in his name, who were born not by natural generation nor by human choice nor by a man's decision but of God. And the Word became flesh and made his dwelling among us, and we saw his glory, the glory as of the Father's only Son, full of grace and truth. (Jn 1:1-5, 9-14)

Today's Gospel reminds us that the Son of God became flesh and lived on earth. In the genealogy from last night's Gospel, we see, specifically, where Jesus entered into human history.

But it is in the contrast of the two passages that reveals the extent of God's love for us.

We know that Jesus came to save us from our sins. But we may not have realized that God the Father wants to do even more than save us. He wants to adopt us into his family...to give us a share in his own nature—his own divinity—just as God the Son took on our humanity.

And this is where it helps to understand something about the Mass. In a few minutes, after the altar is prepared for the Liturgy of the Eucharist, the deacon will pour water and wine into the chalice. As he does so, he will say this prayer, silently:

By the mystery of this water and wine, may we come to share in the divinity of Christ, who humbled himself to share in our humanity.

The water represents humanity—our human nature. The wine represents divinity—God's nature.

So, the deacon prays that, as the small drop of water is absorbed into the larger quantity of wine—symbolizing the sharing of these natures with each other—that God may likewise make us into what he is.

God became fully what we are, so that we could share in what he is. He lowered himself to our level so that he could raise us to his! This is not something we can do. It is only something we can receive as a gift. And today's Gospel tells us how it is brought about, though we may not see it clearly at first glance. Listen again to these words:

...to those who did accept [Jesus] he gave power to become children of God, to those who believe in his name, who were born not by natural generation nor by human choice nor by a man's decision but of God. (Jn 1:12-13)

How does this happen?

In the Sacrament of Baptism!

When we're baptized, God adopts us into his family and he ceases to be merely our Creator. He becomes our Father...and we his beloved sons and daughters! His Holy Spirit begins to dwell in us, and the more we allow his Spirit to increase, and our broken, sinful human nature to decrease, the more we become what we were created for.

And if we fall away from him due to sin, God still does not abandon us, but reaches out to us—again and again—to bring us back to him.

How does he do this?

In the Sacrament of Confession.

When we commit serious sin, the Holy Spirit—who began to live in us at Baptism—departs from our soul. And that's why our sin leaves us empty, dissatisfied and alienated from others...from God...and even from ourselves.

But when we go to Confession, two important things happen.

First, our sins are forgiven. Completely forgiven...to the extent that we've made a full and honest confession.

But we are also filled once again with the Holy Spirit of God and our broken soul is restored to the beauty it enjoyed the moment we were Baptized. Sin is taken away to make space for the Holy Spirit to return to dwell once again in our souls.

But here's the biggest proof of all of God's love for us!

Not only did the Son of God become human in the person of Jesus Christ and live among us. He goes even further in his love to become our food in the Holy Eucharist. Jesus gives his priests the power to change mere bread and wine into his Body and Blood so that when we receive him worthily in Holy Communion, he not only dwells among us—he lives in us—in our body and soul.

From Mary, the Son of God received a human body to become what we are.

Through the Sacraments—starting with Baptism—Jesus gives us a share of what he is so that we can become, little by little—with his love, mercy and grace—what we were created to be in the first place...partakers in the very life of God.

And the best news of all is that we don't have to wait for the next life to begin to experience the love that God has for us...and the peace and joy that his love fill us with!

When we have had even a small taste of God's love for us in this life, it changes everything, and all the inadequate things we have pursued in search of this kind of love, but which have inevitably failed to deliver, suddenly become less and less important to us as we realize what...and more importantly, who...we were made for.

Whereas many of the homilies I grew up with felt like they were filled with superficial words about God's love, the claims of this homily can actually be put to the test to see if it delivers on the love of God that it promises.

God made the first move by coming to us...by becoming one of us.

If we've been away from God, we can come back to him by going to Confession so he can restore the pipeline between his heart and ours to proper working order.

If you do that much...I assure you...God will take it from there!

And your life will never be the same again.
